Unfortunately, this is a more common occurrence than you might think. Insurance companies are for-profit businesses, and they are often more interested in protecting their bottom line than in helping their customers.

This can lead to a number of problems, including:

- Delays in processing claims
- Denials of coverage
- Lowball offers

- Unfair claim settlements

If you find yourself in a situation where your insurance company is not being helpful, there are a few things you can do to protect yourself:

1. Document everything. Keep a record of all communications with your insurance company, including phone calls, emails, and letters. This will help you prove your case if you need to file a complaint or lawsuit.
2. Get a copy of your insurance policy. This will help you understand your rights and responsibilities under your policy.
3. Contact your state insurance commissioner. The insurance commissioner can help you resolve disputes with your insurance company.
4. Hire an attorney. If you are unable to resolve your dispute with your insurance company on your own, you may need to hire an attorney to help you.

It is important to remember that you are not alone. There are many resources available to help you if you are having problems with your insurance company.

By following these tips, you can protect yourself from being taken advantage of by your insurance company.
