A Glimpse into the Lives of the Mitford Sisters

The Mitford sisters were born into a wealthy and aristocratic family in England. Their father, Lord Redesdale, was a Conservative politician, while their mother, Sydney, was a descendant of the Dukes of Devonshire.

The sisters were: Nancy, the eldest, who became a celebrated author; Unity, a fervent supporter of Adolf Hitler; Jessica, a communist and anti-fascist campaigner; Diana, who married the fascist leader Sir Oswald Mosley; Pamela, a talented artist; and Deborah, the youngest, who became the Duchess of Devonshire.

The Mitfords' lives were filled with both privilege and scandal. They were close friends with the British royal family, but they also had their share of family tragedies and personal struggles.

The Letters: A Window into Their World

The letters in this collection span over six decades, from the early 1920s to the 1970s. They cover a wide range of topics, including love, marriage, family, politics, and the events of World War II.

The letters are written in a lively and engaging style, and they provide a fascinating glimpse into the personalities of the six sisters. Nancy Mitford's letters are witty and insightful, while Unity Mitford's letters reveal her deep admiration for Hitler.

Jessica Mitford's letters are passionate and political, while Diana Mitford's letters are full of longing and regret. Pamela Mitford's letters are filled with her love of art and beauty, while Deborah Mitford's letters are warm and affectionate.

The Complexities of Family Relationships
