In 2006, Darcy May's parents abandoned her and her brother. The two children were left alone in a cold, dark house with no food or water. They were eventually found by the police and taken to a hospital. Darcy May was malnourished and dehydrated, and she had several bruises and cuts.

Darcy May was placed in foster care, where she spent the next several years. She struggled with behavioral problems and developmental delays. She was often withdrawn and unresponsive, and she had difficulty forming relationships with others.

The Foster Care System

The foster care system is a complex and often difficult system to navigate. Children who are placed in foster care often come from traumatic backgrounds, and they may have a variety of emotional and behavioral problems. Foster parents often have to deal with these problems, and they may not always be equipped to provide the children with the support and care they need.

Darcy May's story is a reminder of the challenges that children in foster care face. It is a heartbreaking and inspiring story, and it is a story that needs to be told.

How You Can Help

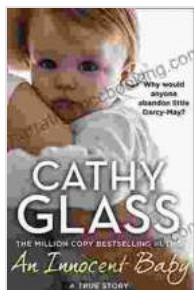

There are a number of ways you can help children in foster care. You can volunteer your time at a local foster care agency, or you can donate money to organizations that support foster children. You can also raise awareness of the foster care system, and you can help to break down the stigma associated with it.

By taking action, you can help to make a difference in the lives of children in foster care.
